MOVE TO BOOST INCOME TAX RATES

Opponents of General Levy

Higher Schedule to Raise
Remaining $50,000,000
Needed in Revenue Bill.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, May 30.—Sales tax opponents moved in the Senate late today to boost the income tax rates to raise the remaining $50, 000,000 necessary to make the revenue bill balance the budget.

Senator Harrison, Democratic

of Mississippi, calling upon the Senate to wind up the revenue fight tonight, moved adoption of the Connally income tax schedule with a surtax schedule graduating to 55 per cent on income in excess of $1,000,000.

Harrison then, late in the day,

notified the Senate that 55 members were pledged against the sales tax and it was futile to press that fact. At the suggestion of Senator

Moses (Rep.), New Hampshire, Harrison placed in the Congressional record the names of those who had signed the petition pledging themselves against the sales tax.

Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—With lines about even divided on the proposed Walsh sales tax amendment to the billion-dollar tax bill, propONENTS and opponents of the proposal maneuvered on the floor, and in the cloakrooms of the Senate today for recruits for a showdown.

Opponents of the measure claimed 51 pledged votes, while advocates of the tax were content with the general assertion that eventually they would be successful in substituting a general levy on manufactured goods in place of the many "nuisance" taxes already written into the bill.

Senator Harrison of Mississippi, ranking Democratic member of the Finance Committee and a leader of the sales tax opposition, said that 12 Democrats had signed "on the line" against the tax. Senator La

Follette, Progressive Republican

from Wisconsin, declared that 16

Republicans had pledged themselves to vote against the tax.

If these 51 votes are actually pledged, the Walsh amendment is as good as beaten.

Reed Refuses to Admit Defeat.

When Senator Reed (Rep.),

Pennsylvania, leader of the forces for the tax, was informed that 51 Senators had signed the agreement to vote against the tax.

If he refused to admit defeat.

"The matter is still in the balance," he declared. "We are still in a tug-of-war."

AUSTRALIA GROWING ALL ITS COTTON AND TOBACCO, ONCE IMPORTED FROM U. S.

By the Associated Press.
SYDNEY, New South Wales,
May 30.

AUSTRALIA, which 10 years ago grew practically no tobacco or cotton, expects to supply all her domestic requirements this year and to have an exportable surplus next year.

Formerly Australia imported the bulk of her cotton and tobacco from the United States.
So rapidly have these crops created with the Federal Government's protection that some of the assistance given to growers is being reduced. For instance, the duty on tobacco has been lowered. Australian tobacco growers, with an estimated crop of 10,000,000 pounds, will be guaranteed 65 cents a pound.

The day workers, making up the remainder of the union's 3100 members, will meet tonight at the same place. Unity Hall, Grand and Page boulevards, and the union officers expect they will approve the plan, completing its ratification.

The union's approval will automatically cancel the authorization it had voted its officers to call a strike at midnight tomorrow.

The Public Service Co. through its Executive Committee, already has accepted the settlement agreement, which is a compromise.

Leaders Favor Acceptance.

The agreement was explained to the men by Robert B. Armstrong, vice president of the international union; Edward W. Forstel, attorney for the international, and H. M.
Nelson, president of the St. Louis group, local No. 788, all recommending acceptance.

points conceded by the compa-

M'DONALD URGES PARLEY ON WORLD TRADE REVIVAL

British Prime Minister Says Lausanne Conference Should Tackle Problem in All Aspects.

ISSUE TOO BIG FOR ONE NATION

London Paper Suggests Question Was Discussed in Recent Conversation With Stimson.

By the Associated Press. LONDON, May 30.—Conversion of the approaching Lausanne conference on war debts and reparations into a conference on world trade was suggested today by Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald in an interview published in the London Daily Mail.

The interview was given by the Prime Minister, who is at Lossiemouth, Scotland, recuperating from a second operation on his eyes, to the Mail's political specialist.

"The problem to be faced," he was quoted as saying, "is not merely the recovery of one nation, but the restarting of world commerce. I should like to see the Lausanne conference boldly tackle this much bigger problem in all its important aspects, as well as deal with the war debts and reparations. It is an international problem and no nation can settle for itself."

The British representatives will strive with might and main to get the conference to face this large issue. The experience of all countries in the last six months particularly ought to induce every nation to take broader views than some of them have done hitherto."

The Mail understands the suggestion for broadening the basis of the conference, which is scheduled to meet at Lausanne on June 16, was one of the main topics MacDonald discussed with Secretary of State Stimson in a recent trans-Atlantic telephone conversation.

United States Ambassador Andrew W. Mellon is likely to be connected with the new development, the newspaper says, adding that it discussed the proposal with the British Government.

Painleve Suggests General Cancellation of Debts, Reparations.

By the Associated Press. MAROMME, France, May 30.—A suggestion that a general cancellation of war debts and reparations, both European and American, might be wise was made in a speech yesterday by former Premier Paul Painleve, who may be a member of the next Cabinet.

"Nevertheless," he said, "to prevent Germany, already relieved of its internal debt obligations, from becoming an overwhelming competitor of its rival and creditor countries," he suggested the possibility of a kind of "compensation fund."

Under such a plan, he said, all European nations might be assured of equal treatment and economic fair play. It would be difficult to realize, however, he said, because of the isolation of the United States.

He added that a scheme of liquidation should be submitted to the United States with a request for its agreement. In its own interest as well as that of every other nation.

Painleve's part in such a scheme, he predicted, would be the relinquishment of the unconditional portion of the reparations payments, as outlined under the Young plan.

French Paper Says Solution of Problems Depends on U. S.

By the Associated Press. PARIS, May 30.—The newspaper Le Temps, in a leading article yesterday on "The American Crisis," declared it was impossible to solve such problems as disarmament, reparations, debts and the "new economic order," without the help of the United States.

The article drew a conclusion of hope that the troubles the United States is undergoing "will recall its rulers to a reasonable rectitude."

The newspaper said it trusted that the distress would show the United States Government "that for any nation, however powerful, there is no salvation possible except in solidarity and the same practice of widespread international collaboration."

The article deplored party strife at Washington before the November elections, asserting "those are bad conditions for taking energetic resolutions."

The weekly financial review of the same paper, under the signature of Frederick Jenney, expressed faith in the American dollar.

The author did not believe the present disfavor of international opinion toward the dollar" meant that it was seriously menaced because withdrawals of foreign gold from the United States were not likely to be important in the future.

Other reasons for faith in the dollar were listed as "bear speculation can be fought successfully, the confidence of Americans in the dollar, the prudence of American private finance, apparent decision of political and financial authorities to maintain the gold standard on the basis of its present parity."

"The situation remains strong," Jenney went on, "and withdrawal of all foreign deposits would not of itself enfeeble the situation to the

Their Plea to Hoover Frees Father

'HOOVER RIGHT NOW,' SAYS JAMES A. REED

Ex-Senator Thus Comments on Opposition to Public Works Program.

By the Associated Press. WASHINGTON, May 29.—In an interview criticizing governmental "extravagance on unnecessary public works," former Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination, yesterday outlined a five-point program to help the country tide over hard times. He called for:

Halting "wasteful expenditures for nonproductive public enterprises."

Repeal of prohibition.

Enactment of a moderate sales tax in lieu of "some of those now being considered."

Levering of tariffs and reciprocity agreements with foreign nations to keep them low.

Reduction of taxes as soon as possible.

Read, here to make a Memorial Day address, denied reports of an "understanding" or "deal" between Missouri Democrats and supporters of Franklin D. Roosevelt, leading candidate for the Presidential nomination. The Missouri delegation last night, many Senators expected either a presidential message to the Senate or a presidential appointment to the White House conference between the President and Republican leaders.

"There has been no agreement, expressed, implied, tentative or otherwise," he said in response to an inquiry, "between any member of the Missouri delegation or anyone representing myself to have any kind of a deal or understanding with any active or potential candidate or any of their representatives."

Informed that his views on public works coincided with those of President Hoover, Reed replied: "Hoover is undoubtedly right now. But he's been on both sides of every question. He originally was for the kind of public works that I am criticizing. The term has been used that he's the 'leading magpie on a squawking train.'

Read said "nonproductive" building at this time, such as the new palatial Commerce Department building and the "senatorial garage" on Capitol Hill, merely drew "money out of productive enterprise where labor is employed and sinks into nonproductive, interest-bearing ventures of various kinds."

As a means of economy he said the Commerce, Agriculture and Labor Departments could be very largely done away with."

"Why, most of them in Arthur Hyde's headquarters," he said, "don't know how to plant a row of corn."

Read said it was "not any business of the Federal Government to undertake to relieve unemployment."

"We are not conducting an almanac house. We haven't got an electionary form of government. The best way to get men employed is to stop wasting money and levying taxes so employers can get back on their feet and employ men."

The House provisions placing minimum rates of 1/4 per cent on stock sales and 1/4 per cent on bond transfers were rejected without record vote. Senator Dix (Dem.), Washington, was defeated, 45 to 37, in an attempt to fix a minimum rate of 1/4 per cent on stock sales.

The present rates of 2 cents a share tax on stock and bond sales were boosted to 4 cents each in accordance with the House and Finance Committee's plan.

Delay in collection of taxes to cause action June 1, Treasurer Announces.

CHICAGO, May 30.—County Treasurer Joseph B. McDonald has announced that Cook County must default June 1 on about $900,000 in bonds and interest.

Delay in collection of taxes and failure to find buyers for $5,000,000 worth of 1932 tax anticipation warrants will be responsible for the default, McDonald said. As yet, only 41 per cent of the 1930 tax roll of $200,000,000 in Chicago and Cook County has been collected.

Woman Killed in Plane Crash.

PORTLAND, Ore., May 30.—A woman registered as Mrs. W. W. Smith, 25 years old, of Portland, died in the wreckage of a mail-passenger plane when it crashed in the Willamette River here today. Dick Gleason, the pilot, suffered severe head and back injuries. He was rescued by a harbor boat patrol. The plane crashed within a few minutes after taking off from Swan Island for Seattle.

Art Goebel, who won the Dole Flight Derby from San Francisco to Honolulu, suffered the fracture of one leg and Riss was crushed to death when the plane was thrown by a gust of wind into a tree in an attempt to take off at the Municipal Airport Saturday. The plane, powered by a Diesel motor, had reached an altitude of about 35 feet and apparently was functioning perfectly when it struck the tree. It was demolished.

Several times, however, Bruening had circled the field several times after taking off and went into a flat spin after a sharp bank. The gasoline tank exploded as the plane hit the ground.

United States Not to Send Delegation to Reparations Conference.

This was emphasized following publication of an interview with Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald.

Bruening's Record; At Helm Two Years as Virtual Dictator.

For more than two years two of the most critical years in Germany's history, Dr. Heinrich Bruening as Chancellor, only a short time before a little known figure in German politics, fought his way through a series of tense crises.

Through the period of the rise of Hitler's Nazis, Socialists and through months of the most strenuous internal financial disarray, Bruening and Von Hindenburg formed an unbeatable team, ruling the country most of the time under the powers of complete dictatorship.

Bruening's first Cabinet was formed on March 29, 1930. "Work or quid" was the first stern order to the Reichstag, and despite the complexity of German partisan politics, the Reichstag generally obeyed.

Several times, however, Bruening adopted semi-dictatorial measures, under authority of Article 4 of the German Constitution, to impose fiscal reforms on the country. In 1930, despairing of Reichstag approval, he sought the aid of Von Hindenburg, who dissolved the Reichstag. For more than three months the Cabinet governed Germany by decree, enforcing a drastic program reducing expenses.

In December he again resorted to the emergency article for another program of reform and economy. In June, 1931, the President published a new series of economy decrees calling for further reduc-

to couple the Connally surtaxes to the Walsh amendment and then eliminate the so-called nuisance taxes, said today several Democrats who had supported the compromise had now apparently lined up against the sales tax. It is believed that some who have announced that they favor the sales tax have a program that they will vote for it only if the Connally surtax rates are adopted.

The Connally surtax amendment, which was rejected by the Senate yesterday, outlined a five-point program to help the country tide over hard times. He called for:

Repeal of prohibition.

Enactment of a moderate sales tax in lieu of "some of those now being considered."

For the time being, at least, President Hoover apparently has decided not to take an open hand in the sales tax fight. After reading this morning of the White House conference between the President and Republican leaders last night, many Senators expected either a presidential message to the Senate or a presidential appointment to the White House conference between the President and Republican leaders.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—All but 122 Democratic national convention delegates have been chosen. The Republicans have yet to select only 42. Each convention will have 1154 full voting delegates.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—Hugh A. Carney, corporation attorney and author of several books on finance, today suggested that Supreme Court Justice Louis D. Brandeis be drafted for the presidency to lead the country to financial rehabilitation.

Carney charged "British banking Chars." were responsible for the financial condition of the country and much of the rest of the world. British bankers, he said, started the panic in 1929 in India. "They deliberately planned to sack the people of India of their savings and stores of value by destroying the value of silver," he said.

He declared the British action in India originally had been planned for 1932, but was postponed two years to allow American bankers to unite and secure the public of the United States. Now, he said, the French banking interests, aided by the French Government, were prolonging conditions by withdrawing gold deposits.

Carney assailed the financial rehabilitation policies of President Hoover and of various Democratic candidates for the presidential nomination.

FORMER ASSISTANT U. S. TREASURER HERE

COLUMBIA, Mo., May 30.—Willard D. Vandiver, 78 years old, noted both as a member of Congress and as an educator, died here yesterday at 9 a. m.

He became ill with appendicitis last Friday. An emergency operation was performed. Pneumonia developed yesterday.

His widow, Mrs. Alice Headlee Vandiver, a sister, Mrs. Carrie Davis of Neosho; and three children, D. Vance Vandiver, Columbia; Mrs. William Byrd, San Antonio, Tex.; and Mrs. W. A. White, Springfield, Ill., survive.

Services will be held here Wednesday.

Vandiver was an Active Democrat for 36 years.

Willard D. Vandiver, who formerly resided in St. Louis, had been active in Democratic politics for 36 years or more. He held elective and appointive offices and was talked of repeatedly as a candidate for Governor and United States Senator.

Born in Virginia, he was taken to Central Missouri as a child by his parents, and educated at Central College, Fayette. He was president of Bellevue Institute from 1890 to 1899 and president of the State Teachers' College at Cape Girardeau, Mo., thereafter until he retired in 1926 to run for Congress.

He was elected to Congress from the old Fourteenth District, Southern Missouri, in 1897 and served four terms. As a member of the House Naval Affairs Committee in 1913 he played a large part in obtaining the appropriation for building the first submarine.

In 1904 Mr. Vandiver managed the successful campaign of Joseph W. Folk for Governor. During Folk's term, beginning in 1905, he was State Superintendent of Insurance for about four years, by appointment of the Governor. Afterward he became vice president of the Central States Life Insurance Co. here.

In Charge of Subtreasury.

He left that occupation in 1913 when appointed Assistant Treasurer of the United States, in charge of the old Subtreasury here, by President Wilson. Until the Subtreasury system was succeeded by the Federal Reserve banks early in 1914 he retained the position. At the time he had charge of a maximum of $33,500,000 as Subtreasurer. The largest transactions of the office in one year were in 1920, when they exceeded $250,000,000. This sum was handled with less than 10 mistakes, aggregating less than $25.

Mr. Vandiver retired to his dairy and horse farm at Columbia when he left the Subtreasury, but he did not withdraw from politics. He had intended to resign the job in 1914 in order to run for Governor, but withdrew his candidacy. In 1916 he had been talked of to succeed Folk as Governor. In 1920 there was a discussion of running for Senator.

Opposed James A. Reed.

The record of James A. Reed as Senator aroused Mr. Vandiver's anger, and when Reed sought election in 1922 Mr. Vandiver campaigned against Reed. Reed was renominated and Mr. Vandiver promptly became president of the League of Loyal Democrats, which sought to elect Bernard R. Brewster, the Republican nominee for Senator, and to defeat Democrats to other offices. At that time Mr. Vandiver declared Reed as a "political imbecile" eliminating the party, although he had no personal quarrel with Reed.

There was talk of making Mr. Vandiver an independent candidate, but he declined. Reed was re-elected.

When opposition to making Reed delegate to the national convention arose in 1924, Mr. Vandiver participated in it. However, in 1926, apparently as a matter of political expediency, he supported Harry B. Hawes in a successful race for Senator. Hawes and Folk had been political enemies and Hawes and Reed allies. In 1928 Mr. Vandiver announced his opposition to Alfred E. Smith for president.

Champ Clark credited Mr. Vandiver with originating the expression, "I'm from Missouri; you've got to show me." Others had been given this credit also, but the Literary Digest approved the Vandiver version as correct after an inquiry. Mr. Vandiver used the exclamation in the course of an impromptu humorous address as a congressman before the Five Clock Club in Philadelphia in 1929.

R. N. WALKER, TAKEN ILL PLAYING GOLF, DIES

Officer of Hall Milling Co., Victim of Heart Disease; Funeral Wednesday.

Robert Norman Walker, vice president and foreign representative of the Hall Milling Co., died of heart disease at 2:15 a. m. today at his residence in the Hawthorne apartments, 4475 West Pine boulevard.

After finishing three holes of golf at Sunset Hill Country Club yesterday afternoon, he became ill and was taken to his home. A physician was called, but his condition became worse. Heretofore he had been regarded as in excellent health. On Saturday he had spent the afternoon playing at his club.

Mr. Walker was 52 years old. Born in Edinburgh, Scotland, he was president of Bellevue Institute from 1890 to 1899 and president of the State Teachers' College at Cape Girardeau, Mo., thereafter until he retired in 1926 to run for Congress.

He was elected to Congress from the old Fourteenth District, Southern Missouri, in 1897 and served four terms. As a member of the House Naval Affairs Committee in 1913 he played a large part in obtaining the appropriation for building the first submarine.

In 1904 Mr. Walker managed the successful campaign of Joseph W. Folk for Governor. During Folk's term, beginning in 1905, he was State Superintendent of Insurance for about four years, by appointment of the Governor. Afterward he became vice president of the Central States Life Insurance Co. here.

In Charge of Subtreasury.

He left that occupation in 1913 when appointed Assistant Treasurer of the United States, in charge of the old Subtreasury here, by President Wilson. Until the Subtreasury system was succeeded by the Federal Reserve banks early in 1914 he retained the position. At the time he had charge of a maximum of $33,500,000 as Subtreasurer. The largest transactions of the office in one year were in 1920, when they exceeded $250,000,000. This sum was handled with less than 10 mistakes, aggregating less than $25.

Mr. Walker retired to his dairy and horse farm at Columbia when he left the Subtreasury, but he did not withdraw from politics. He had intended to resign the job in 1914 in order to run for Governor, but withdrew his candidacy. In 1916 he had been talked of to succeed Folk as Governor. In 1920 there was a discussion of running for Senator.

Opposed James A. Reed.

The record of James A. Reed as Senator aroused Mr. Vandiver's anger, and when Reed sought election in 1922 Mr. Vandiver campaigned against Reed. Reed was renominated and Mr. Vandiver promptly became president of the League of Loyal Democrats, which sought to elect Bernard R. Brewster, the Republican nominee for Senator, and to defeat Democrats to other offices. At that time Mr. Vandiver declared Reed as a "political imbecile" eliminating the party, although he had no personal quarrel with Reed.

There was talk of making Mr. Vandiver an independent candidate, but he declined. Reed was re-elected.

When opposition to making Reed delegate to the national convention arose in 1924, Mr. Vandiver participated in it. However, in 1926, apparently as a matter of political expediency, he supported Harry B. Hawes in a successful race for Senator. Hawes and Folk had been political enemies and Hawes and Reed allies. In 1928 Mr. Vandiver announced his opposition to Alfred E. Smith for president.

Champ Clark credited Mr. Vandiver with originating the expression, "I'm from Missouri; you've got to show me." Others had been given this credit also, but the Literary Digest approved the Vandiver version as correct after an inquiry. Mr. Vandiver used the exclamation in the course of an impromptu humorous address as a congressman before the Five Clock Club in Philadelphia in 1929.

Admits Turning in False Fire Alarm.

The body of Samuel Farbstein, a 26-year-old shoemaker, of 3141 Thomas street, was found today in a ravine in Forest Park near Tamm and Oakland avenues, a bullet wound in the heart and a revolver lying near by. Both wrists were slashed with a razor.

Farbstein's father, for whom he worked at 1516 Hodiamont avenue, told police his son had been home yesterday, taking the father's revolver.

Young Farbstein was arrested Friday on complaint of a 12-year-old girl. His father said he remanded him for annoying the girl, whom he had known for some time.

THE POST-DISPATCH PLATFORM

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principle; that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate initiatives or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing news; always be dramatically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong; whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

For a Third Party.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
D. R. BUTLER's address on our political system is really illuminating. But one wonders whether, after all, it means anything. Like other liberals, Dr. Butler is just crying about the present two reigning political parties, who, in spite of showing their utter incapacity of coping with the present modern problems, are still the ones that rule us.

He hopes the coming conventions will declare themselves and face these new problems squarely. But there he is mistaken. They will pussyfoot and straddle all the real issues as they always did, and all those representatives which the local leaders put up for us to vote for will be elected as per schedule, will go to Washington, find their wives and relatives good jobs, give us the "razzberry" and life will go on as usual until the next election.

Why doesn't Dr. Butler come out and say that the parties have outlived their usefulness, that there is no hope to remedy them from the inside and the only remedy is from the outside? Yes—from the outside with new party.

There is no better time than the present for the coming of a new real liberal party. The thousands of people who abstain from voting because they see the uselessness of choosing candidates will surely follow leaders of Dr. Butler's type. In short, instead of just lamenting and hoping as usual, why not act for a change and see what happens? L. H.

Earhart Editorial.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
THIS is to thank you for the editorial of May 22, entitled "Magnificent" and eulogizing Amelia Earhart. The first reading of it gave me an uplifting spirit, and a renewal of courage. I then cut it out and pasted it in my pocketbook.

We need such an outpouring of cheer, such renewed assurance that there is "no Atlantic that we cannot cross." M. E. PARDON.

Lady Chetwode and Economy.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I AGREE with your editorial of May 17, "Making Common Sense Fashionable," in which you commend Lady Chetwode for her act of economy, especially during this depression, when so many are hungry despite the fact that there is plenty of food in the land.

If these principles of economy were practiced by all, the depression might not be so far-reaching as it is today.

Also, I am of the opinion of James Macintosh of Hot Springs, Ark., about what is worn at the Court of St. James's.

I do think people of this country should be individual enough not to be so fearful of criticism on matters which pertain strictly to their own country, and for the maintenance of their own people. One family cannot pattern always after another family, as finances may be different, temperaments, situations and conditions in every way unlike.

We want to look "nice" and should; also to have plenty to eat of the best, as nature provided that process by which we are to nourish physical bodies; but we can and should be reasonable in our spending, that by so doing we may be able to lend a helping hand to our fellow man if he is unfortunate enough to need it.

The taxpayers of Uncle Sam surely would like to have their problems solved in such a way to keep their homes and have some left to rely on in case of need.

MRS. ELLA J. (REED) FIELDS.

The Vultures Gather.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

AS the dark, foul vultures of the fields gather and feast on a putrid carcass, so when hunger, want, bankruptcy and unemployment bring nation-wide misery to our people, altho the halls of Congress falls the shadow of men whose creed is greed, whose god is gold, seeking to profit from our financial woes by fleching millions from the people through new excessive tariff rates on copper, coal, and lumber.

Republicans in Congress voting to increase the profits of the lords of copper, coal, oil and lumber are following the Republican policy of years of enriching the few by taxing the many.

But members of Congress elected as Democrats joining the Republicans in this raid on the public pocketbook have departed from the Democratic doctrine of opposition to high protective tariff rates.

Cleveland and Wilson, the only Democratic Presidents in the last 65 years, each opposed a high protective tariff policy. Imposition of these new tariff rates will injure instead of protect the public welfare.

The rank and file will never consent that the high protective tariff policy shall become the creed of the Democratic party. Two thousand years of Christian civilization have placed on the brow of Judas Iscariot the seal of divine and human condemnation, because he betrayed One who trusted him.

And so will the masses of the Democratic party place the brand of political condemnation on those elected as Democrats who now deny the principles of Jefferson, Cleveland and Wilson and bow at the high protective tariff shrine erected by the Republican party.

EDWARD C. CROW.

NEW CLEAVAGES.

The sixty-fourth Decoration day since Gen. John A. Logan set May 30 as the occasion for remembering the graves of the Civil War dead finds the major wound of that conflict healed, but in its place score on score of cleavages cut across American life.

The question of taxation transcends all sectional divisions and draws its lines only along fences that separate homes. One group representing the great number of people would tax colossal wealth in proportion to its ability to pay. The chosen representatives of wealth would saddle a sales tax on the people in order to relieve wealth of the burden it should in all justice bear.

The line between those who would capitalize on their World War service and those who show the wisdom of desiring to prevent such a raid likewise is drawn without respect to section or community. On all sides, the loud cries go up for payment and indulgence without proper thought for the consequences. Fortunately, reasoned and determined opposition rises from patriotic groups to withstand such pressure.

That prohibition has brought about a serious cleavage in the American people is one of the most manifest developments in our history. The wet and the dry must live as neighbors, yet between their philosophies is a breach as wide as that which separated the men of the Blue from the men of the Gray.

It is an issue that cuts across party and profession, church and club, state and nation, and, because it knows no boundaries, it is the harder to deal with.

Greater still is the gulf growing out of the conflict between a social and economic order partly based on benefits for the people and partly on benefits for the few at the expense of the many. Vast utilizations which enrich a handful of operators through excessive rates and the development of banking functions which induce small investors to risk and to lose their life savings in indefensible undertakings are but two evidences of this great division in our life.

If the Union was divided into two sections during the Civil War, it is today cut up into as many small areas as there are trade and industrial interests. Oil, lumber, coal and copper seek aid for themselves at the expense of all other products. Senators become ward politicians and join hands to push through one another's petty claims. Manufacturing seeks still higher protection and agriculture asks for aid. A Hawley-Smoot tariff is enacted and a Farm Board is set up and millions of dollars thrown away.

Since the rise of the city, the cleavage between metropolitan and rural interests has grown by leaps and bounds. State constitutions, formed in the days when the population was predominantly rural, continue to deliver the cities into the hands of the country legislators and the result only makes for strife, discontent and wasted time and money. The national Government undertakes the enforcement of a law. The states repeat their supporting statutes. By its very nature, the federal system of government gives rise to differences of the first order.

Complicating the whole situation is the change that has come over the major political parties. The supporters of Grant stood for one thing. Greeley stood for an entirely different set of principles. The voters of 1876 knew the difference between Tilden and Hayes. No one puzzled over Cleveland and Blaine. Today the shade of difference between the Republican and Democratic parties, if indeed one exists, is so slight as to be indistinguishable. Senator Norris has been called the best Democrat by Republicans and Senator Robinson of Arkansas has been called a Republican by Democrats.

The best tribute which the American people can pay today to the men who fought at Shiloh, Wilson's Creek and the Wilderness to preserve the Union, is to dedicate themselves to finding ways for making effective their views on the multitude of complex cleavages that have buried from sight Mason and Dixon's line.

ADD WASHINGTONIANA.

A writer in the Forum, whose article is reprinted in part on this page, has done a thorough job of debunking the Washington bicentennial festivities, now raging throughout the country. How the austere Father of His Country would be gratified could he return to view the gaudy spectacle! One item of competent, relevant and material evidence has been omitted from the writer's collection of twentieth century Washingtonians, however, doubtless because the tidbit was not made public until after the article appeared. We hasten to supply it to our readers: The Bicentennial Commission is a devoted customer of a clipping bureau, which thus far this year has clipped for it 76,203 newspaper and magazine stories on the celebration and on Washington, 35,771 in February alone. The bill for these, at the bureau's minimum rate, would be $3048.12. Knowledge that this essential part of the celebration is being properly administered should make the heart of the lowliest taxpayer throb with patriotic pride as he watches the Washington pageant go by.

A BOLD CANDIDATE.

The wild race for nominations for the 13 posts of Representative-at-large in Missouri has been distinguished by the entry of a candidate with the hardihood to declare himself in favor of American participation in the League of Nations. This bold candidate is a Republican, Eugene A. Hecker of Ferguson, a native St. Louisian and a Harvard graduate. His grandfather was Gen. Friedrich Karl Franz Hecker, the German revolutionist and German-American leader, and his great-uncle was Dr. Emil Praetorius, long editor of the Westliche Post and founder of the Liberal Republican movement. Mr. Hecker's contention is that the opposition to the League of Nations was due to partisan jealousy of Woodrow Wilson; that it was never based on reason. Such fair-mindedness harks back to the kind of Republicanism which his distinguished forbear so fearlessly espoused. It is good to see it rise again on the sorry political scene of the present.

REFUGES FOR WILD FOWL.

Paul G. Redington, chief of the Bureau of Biological Survey, has called for an army of volunteers to provide nesting, resting and feeding grounds for wild fowl. Numerous persons and organizations have responded, and the movement will probably gain impetus as it proceeds. Redington's immediate goal is to flood dry water areas and create lakes and ponds in the northern tier of states west of Lake Michigan, where millions of young ducks died last spring and summer for want of water shortly after broods hatched.

Meanwhile, Congress is being asked to provide funds for wild fowl refuges to repair the damage done by drought and by the reclamation of natural wild fowl grounds for agricultural purposes. Untold acreage of this kind has been drained over a period of many years, only to contribute to farm surpluses, and should be restored. In the volume, "More Waterfowl," published by More Game Birds in America, it is stated:

No single factor retards the natural increase of water-fowl so much as reduction in breeding grounds caused largely by drainage and water diversion for irrigation. As settlements spread, sloughs, swamps, marshes and other wet areas, which formerly furnished ample food and nesting sites for water-fowl, were claimed, usually for agriculture. Grain production on this continent, chiefly responsible, has grown in excess of profitable marketability. In case of need, we are not prepared to say. On his own merits, we welcome back an intelligent exile who never should have been deported.

As in other things, America has been prodigal in its attitude toward game birds. While geese and ducks are still plentiful, it behooves us to plan for the future and provide them with means of livelihood.

END THE TAX BILL FIGHT.

It is high time Congress ended the tax bill fight and the administration leaders gave up their dream of a general sales tax.

The budget can be balanced by increasing surtaxes upon great incomes, a device which has the added virtue of leaving Congress in good conscience for the selective sales tax it has already voted.

It would be a mistake to take the general sales tax back to the House, and apparently a majority in the Senate is determined that it shall not go back.

The House has settled that question, and it has settled it right. Such a tax would place a handicap upon trade, already reduced to a point without precedent since the World War. Only in the gravest emergency could such a measure be justified, and not even then could it be justified without having first exhausted the Federal power to tax wealth.

To increase the surtaxes upon great incomes by some such plan as the Connally schedule is a matter of good faith. It is also a matter of public decency. The large taxpayers of the United States have not distinguished themselves in this discussion in England, where there is much less wealth than there is over here, the income tax has been the chief factor in balancing the national budget. Every attempt to make it exercise the same function in our own country has been opposed by all the power of wealth, a power so great that it has at times moved the men at Washington around like pawns on a cheap board.

The English people apparently have a somewhat different notion of patriotism than is prevalent in the United States. When their country needs them, they step up and pay.

If everybody paid his due in the United States there would be no necessity for sales taxes of any kind, nor would it be necessary to impose a truly burdensome tax upon anyone.

It is our unconscionable tax dodging, a part of the widespread demoralization of the American people, that has precipitated the spectacle at Washington. It is a spectacle that does us no credit as a nation.

Speaking about reductions in ocean rates, Amelia Earhart made the voyage with $20.

ROAD MARKERS IN THE COUNTY.

Street and road signs are badly needed in many sections of St. Louis County. Their erection and maintenance should be a function of the county and the various towns. The system of names for thoroughfares should be simplified. There are a number of instances where a through route bears a variety of local designations, and numerous cases of duplicate or similar names.

Development of fine roads in the last few years and the spread of subdivisions have caused much confusion for motorists. There are new highways which many persons do not recognize. The county no longer is rural and the country custom of doing without signs or adopting makeshift markers no longer will suffice. In the past the Automobile Club of Missouri has furnished many signs, but the territory is by no means covered by them. Besides, this is a public obligation and should not be left to private or semi-public organizations.

Modern types of durable, easily read guides should be utilized. In this hint may be taken from the number markers on State routes. However, there will be more confusion if the letter designations of proposed supplementary State routes are followed.

POLICEMAN WALKS INTO ROBBERY AND 3 MEN ARE CAUGHT

Officer in Side Room of Barbecue Stand Balks
Holdup and Takes One Prisoner Immediately.

TWO OTHERS SEIZED IN ROOF-TOP CHASE

All Reported to Have Confessed Crime and Two Others Committed Several Hours Previously.

A robber who stole $13 from the barbecue stand of Theodore Weland, 4209 South Broadway, early yesterday, was captured in the place by Patrolman Harry Helfrich of the Wyoming Street Station, who entered during the holdup. The robber's two accomplices who escaped later were arrested on information obtained from the prisoner.

Patrolman Helfrich had been in a side room with Weland, discussing the description of three men who had committed two robberies several hours earlier, when two men entered the stand and Weland went to serve them.

One drew a revolver and ordered Weland to hold up his hands as the other went to a cash register behind the counter and took the money. Patrolman Helfrich heard the order and entered, firing a shot at the armed robber, who fled to an automobile where the third man was waiting. The robber behind the counter was captured with the money in his hand.

Two Fugitives Caught.

The prisoner said he was Douglas Frazier, 20 years old. When police went to his address in the 2300 block of Whittemore place, they saw two men flee over the roofs of nearby houses and found them hiding in a refrigerator in another house in the block. A loaded revolver was on the floor under the refrigerator.

The two said they were George McKinney and Thomas Holmes, both 21. According to the police, they were identified as the barbecue stand robbers and in the two holdups preceding it. All three were said to have admitted the crimes.

The previous robbery was that of Alton McKeon, 1330 Adams street, Granite City, and a young woman, who were held up at a Boulevard stop at Longfellow and Russell boulevards. McKeon's automobile was stolen and used in the holdup of Clarence Blackburn, 5151 Page boulevard, and a young woman seated in his automobile in front of 3631A Ohio avenue. Blackburn was robbed of $7.40. The stolen machine was found abandoned after it had been used in the barbecue stand robbery.

Druggist Robbed of $60 and Customer of $37.

Fred A. Ahrens, proprietor of the Usona drug store, Kingshighway and Waterman avenue, was robbed of $60 and a customer, Gerard Patterson, 5079 Waterman avenue, of $37 by two armed men who entered the store last night and forced them to go behind the prescription counter.

Louis Raskas, proprietor of a dairy at 1311 North Newbern avenue, and Robert Goldman, 5495 Maffitt avenue, were entering a garage back of the dairy early today when an armed man robbed Raskas of $6 and Goldman of $10.

William Bedford, Negro watchman of the Banner Laundry Co., 100 South Jefferson avenue, reported he had been bound early today by two armed Negroes who attempted to move the safe out of the office. Bedford said the robbers fled after discovering the safe was impeded in concrete.

BANK OF FRANCE TO SEEK PAYMENT ON GERMAN LOAN

Will Try to Get Part of Its Share of $90,000,000 Credit Due June 4.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, May 30.—The Bank of France intends to try to get back a certain percentage of its share of the credit of $90,000,000 to the German Reichsbank due June 4, it was learned today. The United States Federal Reserve Bank, the Bank of England and the Bank of International Settlements also participated.

At its recent meeting the Bank for International Settlements voted to renew its share. The Bank of France will take action Thursday.

EDWARD F. SWIFT FUNERAL

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 30.—Funeral services for Edward F. Swift, meat packer and capitalist, who died from a window in his apartment Saturday, will be held tomorrow from St. James' Methodist Church at 2 p.m., with burial in Mount Hope Cemetery.

Mr. Swift fell eight stories to his death, landing within a few feet of the chauffeur who was waiting to take him to his office. A coroner's jury heard his family's and associates testify that he was in good health and financial condition and brought in a verdict of accidental death. It was thought he was standing in a French window in his sunroom and lost his balance over the 18-inch high sill.

COMMUNIST NOMINEE URGES SOVIET IN U.S.

W. Z. Foster Also Assails
"Hunger and War Program" of Hoover.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 30.—William Z. Foster, communist candidate for President, today called for "the workers to take the revolutionary way out and establish a Soviet United States."

As plans were made for a campaign in 40 states, with a million votes as the goal, Foster said: "The Communist Party directs its main fire against the hunger and war program of the Hoover Government."

James W. Ford, Alabama Negro, was nominated for the Vice Presidency at the two-day convention of the party which closed here last night.

A demand will be made for "unemployment insurance at the expense of the Government and employers to relieve the wholesale starvation among workers," Foster said.

The story, pieced together from Blume's statements, was that a series of large waves filled the canoes and it submerged. The four young men dropped into the water and held on to its side.

The story, pieced together from Blume's statements, was that a series of large waves filled the canoes and it submerged. The four young men dropped into the water and held on to its side.

Blume, 22, Paul Gillespie was the first to go down. His brother George became hysterical and he too soon sank. Blume and Houchens got back into the canoe but a wave swept them out and Blume climbed back in alone. Then he lost consciousness.

Blume was rescued by the outbound tanker W. S. Miller. The tanker transferred him to a barge that carried him to Baltimore.

SAYS DISHONESTY IN BUSINESS CAUSES ECONOMIC TROUBLES

Dr. J. M. Alexander Tells Presbyterians Public Faith Has Been Abused.

MONTREAL, N. C., May 30.—Dr. J. M. Alexander of Columbia, Mo., principal speaker at the stewardship meeting of the Presbyterian Church in the United States last night, said the world's present economic troubles were "due to dishonesty in the business world."

He assailed the "man who gets more than he contributes from the economic stream," and referred to recent "investigations which have disclosed that public faith has been abused" by business men and "Wall street."

Persons who have profited dishonestly at the expense of honest men have "offered millions to churches as a salve for conscience," he continued, declaring "no gift should be acceptable when given with a consciousness of having done wrong to a fellow man."

"In this country today," he said, "a great seminary bears the name of a famous man, a crook who gave his conscience money to the church. The taint of blood is upon it in the sight of God. Many try to buy off personal responsibility by writing a check, but God wants you, not his own lung power."

Homecoming was a big event. The boy hugged his father, his mother and 12 brothers and sisters one after another. A shepherd dog gave him a kiss while he was sick, was given a name, kept him breathing after disease had paralyzed his lung muscles. "Everything looks better than I remember it," he said.

MONTRÉAL, Que., May 30.—For the first time in history, says a study in "social changes" from the University of Chicago Press, women outnumber men in urban centers of the United States. The ratio of men to women in metropolitan areas during the last census period was 91.1 to 100.

In rural communities, however, men still predominate. The ratio for the country districts is 102.3 to 100.

CUTTING PUTS BUYING POWER AHEAD OF BALANCING BUDGET

Senator in Urging $5,000,000,000
Public Works Says Hoover Formerly Favored Idea.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—Restitution of the purchasing power to the people and prevention of distress were described today in the Senate by Cutting (Rep.), New Mexico, as more important than balancing the budget.

He urged approval of his bill for a $5,000,000,000 public works program and said President Hoover had formerly favored that method of providing employment.

"If this country is going to continue to retain the respect of the civilized universe," said Cutting, "it will devote a little less of its time to the mere question of balancing the budget, important though that may be in the present state of public opinion, and will devote an indefinitely greater proportion of its attention to the question of restoring the purchasing power of the consuming population of this country, maintaining the American standard of living and preventing misery, unemployment, distress and starvation."

Government Organ, Investia, Says Program Is to Seize Siberia to Speed the Action.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, May 30.—The Government organ Investia today charged certain Japanese elements with seeking an invasion of Eastern Siberia to "facilitate Japan's preparations for war against the United States by making available for the Japanese military machine the rich natural resources of Asiatic Russia."

In a sharp warning to Japan not to try to lay hands on Siberia, the editorial called attention to "recent demands in certain sections of the Japanese press for war against Soviet Russia."

Declaring the resources of Manchuria were sought first, Investia said that intelligent Japanese public opinion could not be relieved of responsibility for the silence in the face of such a campaign,
"which might lead to the sending of millions of people to a bloody slaughter."

"The Soviet Union does not demand anything of Japan except respect of its borders," the editorial went on. "It wants to continue peaceful and friendly relations and to increase economic intercourse mutually beneficial to both countries."

"The extent of our strength is recognized even by some Japanese politicians, because the menace of that strength is shouted by the Japanese press. This won't frighten us."

"Japanese imperialism has already been in Siberia at a cost of a billion rubles and much blood.
This happened when the red army was only in process of formation, when the Soviet Union did not produce three times more coal and iron than Japan."

"If Japanese imperialism seek-es to entangle its population in a n.e.-adventure, they will break their own teeth. Siberia is not a street on which imperialist robbers may walk in safety."

"Not only the imperialists but the masses of both countries would suffer from any such intervention.
That is why Soviet public opinion is calling on the serious elements of Japan to put an end to unprecedented bloody propaganda."

Approved U. S. Kidnapping Bill.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—The Senate Judiciary Committee agreed today to report favorably on the bill of Senator Patterson (Rep.), Missouri, for Federal punishment of kidnapping, removing its optional penalty of the death sentence. As the bill will be reported, it provides that imprisonment for any term the court deems may be imposed upon conviction of defendants for transporting a kidnapped person from one State to another.

Montreal Broker Found Dead.

By the Associated Press.

MONTRÉAL, Que., May 30.—Walter E. J. Luther, a former chairman of the Montreal Stock Exchange, was found dead early today at his summer home at Hudson Heights, Que., 46 miles from Montreal. Death was thought to have been due to carbon monoxide. Luther was a partner in the stock brokerage firm of Craig & Luther. He returned from the chairmanship of the Montreal exchange this month.

70,000 TELEPHONE CHANGES VANDEVENTER BANK CLAIMS

More than 70,000 changes of names, telephone numbers and addresses occur in the June issue of the telephone directory, of which 235,000 copies will be distributed in the next 10 days. Delivery will be made by 150 men selected by relief agencies.

Four new telephone names, "Rosedale," "Lander," "Dixon" and "Ulane" will appear. The "Rosedale" exchange is for many former "Forest" subscribers who were not kept on that branch when a new dial service was begun at midnight Saturday. "Lander" is a new exchange in Southwest St. Louis and "Dixon" and "Ulane" exchanges are in St. Louis County. The new directory will be green in cover color for the first time in 43 years.

English Girl Missing From Harbin.

TOKIO, May 30.—A dispatch to the Rengo (Japanese) News Agency said today that Mary Fleet, 12-year-old daughter of B. H. Fleet, British publisher of the Harbin (Manchuria) Observer, disappeared Saturday while on the way home from school. It was feared that she had been kidnapped by bandits.

RAINEY COMBINES WITH GARNER IN REPLY TO HOOVER

Asserts Most of Building and Waterway Projects Were Proposed by Coolidge or Present Executive

BEGS CO-OPERATION FROM PRESIDENT

Expenditures for Banks, Railroads and Insurance Concerns Held Useless Without Wider Relief.

By the Associated Press. WASHINGTON, May 30.—Striking out again at President Hoover, the House Democratic leadership yesterday forecast that his stay in the White House was drawing to a close and said that as President he had registered "a failure practically complete."

In a double-barreled blast directed at the President's stand against the Garner relief program, Speaker Garner and Majority Leader Rainey charged he was attempting to blame Congress for conditions arising during his administration.

Garner's statement was through the Democratic National Committee, while Rainey issued his at his office, following up the Texan's answer yesterday to President Hoover's denunciation of his $2,309,000,000 plan as "pork barrel" legislation.

Late Beginning for Economy. "I have no personal feeling in regard to the President's criticism of the measures I have offered as an amelioration, if not a correction, of our depression woes," Garner said. "I realize it is part of the presidential process of alibi himself from his own inability or unwillingness to promulgate a comprehensive and adequate process of accomplishing the result."

Garner said Mr. Hoover had two and one-half years to effect economies while the Treasury deficit was mounting, but that he was blaming Congress and added:

"His necessity (to blame Congress) is the more apparent as he is a candidate for re-election this year and if the popular verdict stands as has been indicated by every recent election, he must realize that his stay at the White House is drawing to a close."

Mounting of Debt.

Rainey recalled that most of the $1,209,000,000 in public building and necessary public improvements in the Garner program had been recommended by either the Coolidge or present administration and said it was difficult to reconcile Mr. Hoover's charges of "pork barrel" when he had previously sponsored such a program.

"In his recent pronouncement against the Garner plan, the President absolutely reverses his position he has heretofore taken," Rainey said.

Asserting that by July 1, $4,000,000,000 would be added to the national indebtedness since Hoover became President, the Illinois Democrat said:

The enormous amount represented by this deficit is twice as much as we provide for in expenditures over a series of years in this bill, and we have absolutely nothing to show for it in the way of capital investment. It is money absolutely dissipated and thrown to the winds in order to enable the Hoover administration to do nothing at all except to promote the candidacy of the President for re-election.

"President Hoover, as President, has registered a failure practically complete."

Program Left Incomplete. "All the expenditures we have been making under his approval and his suggestions for the resuscitation of banks, railroads and insurance companies have been absolutely wasted unless our program is adopted. If our program is defeated the worst is yet to come."

"We have tried to co-operate with the President in his supposed plans for a restoration of normal conditions. The country has been accustomed to strong leadership from the White House, not the vacillating leadership we are getting now."

He added: "It takes a lot of courage to follow the vacillating public policy of the President," and declared the chief executive's stand was out of harmony with the Republican platform on which he was elected and the platform recently adopted by the Illinois Republican convention.

"From now on we propose to insist that the President co-operate with us," Rainey continued, "and if he fails to do it, then our program is defeated on account of his opposition to it, we propose to place the responsibility where it belongs, directly on the President of the United States and his vacillating, incompetent leadership."

FRED F WILCOX IS 2ND; CROWD OF 140,000; ARNOLD HURT

THE FIRST TEN.

By the Associated Press. INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 30.—This is the way the first ten drivers finished in the 500-mile international race today:

1. Fred Frame, Los Angeles.
2. Howdy Wilcox, Indianapolis.
3. Cliff Berger, Los Angeles.
4. Bob Carey, Anderson, Ind.
5. Russell Snowberger, Philadelphia.

6. Zeke Meyer, Philadelphia.
7. Ira Hall, Terre Haute, Ind.
8. Fred Winnie, Philadelphia.
9. Billy Winn, Kansas City.
10. Joe Huff, Indianapolis.

Four drivers were flagged off the track after Huff finished. They were Phil Shafer, Des Moines, Iowa, finished eleventh; Kelly Pettibone, Los Angeles, twelfth; Tony Guttitta, Kansas City, thirteenth, and stubby Stubblefield, Los Angeles, fourteenth.

By the Associated Press. SPEEDWAY, INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 30.—Freddy Frame of Los Angeles won the 500-mile international automobile race here today, finishing about a minute ahead of Howdy Wilcox, Indianapolis.

Frame's time was 4:48:08.79 for an average of 104.14 miles an hour.

This broke all records for the race, smashing the previous mark of 101.13 established by Peter de Paolo in 1925.

Frame, a 37-year-old, campaigner of race courses, always was a contender. With the exception of the first 50 miles, he was never farther back than tenth place. He has been racing for 10 years and finished second in the 1931 event.

By his victory, Frame won $20,000 as first prize and is in a position to earn perhaps $25,000 by racing this season.

Frame took the lead in the last 50 miles and refused to yield it. He and Wilcox fought it out in the closing miles of the race with both having a lead of only 8 seconds at the finish.

Bergers Third, Carey Fourth. Cliff Berger, Los Angeles, finished third, two and a half miles back of Wilcox.

Bob Carey of Anderson, Ind., finished fourth, trailing several miles behind.

Russell Snowberger, Philadelphia, was fifth, in crossing the finishing line.

Billy Arnold Injured.

The race resulted in two serious mishaps. Billy Arnold, the Chicagoan, suffered a broken collar bone, and his mechanician, Spider Matlock, suffered a broken pelvis bone, in the major smashup in the race. Arnold, one of the pre-race favorites, drove his car into a retaining wall on the north turn, then roaring along on his 150th mile.

Tony Guttitta narrowly escaped death when his car threw the right rear wheel while tearing down the stretch in the closing minutes of the race. Luckily he managed to keep the car on the track and the other drivers tearing along behind him avoided hitting him.

When the 40 cars started the race at 10 o'clock, it was estimated the attendance was between 140,000 and 150,000, exceeding the crowd of a year ago. The race is for $100,000 in prizes.

Three Former Winners Out. Louis Schneider, Indianapolis, winner of the 1931 race, gave up at the end of 125 laps because of motor trouble. He had covered 312 miles. Schneider made the third former winner of the race to be forced out. The others were Billy Arnold and Louis Meyer.

Ernie Triplett of Los Angeles, a threat in the race, was forced to quit after traveling 312 miles to a quiet clump. He had led the race for 11 laps.

The car driven by Joe Russo, Indianapolis, dropped out after going 45 miles because of a water leak in the motor.

Ray Campbell of Detroit was officially declared out of the race after mechanics had worked two hours in an attempt to repair his damaged motor. His car had a broken crank shaft.

The car driven by W. H. Stubblefield of Los Angeles was forced out when it burst into flames on the back stretch. The flames were quickly extinguished and the car was not seriously damaged. Chet Miller of Detroit also gave up the race due to motor trouble. His car had a broken crank shaft.

THE FIRST TEN.

By the Associated Press.
INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 30.—
This is the way the first ten drivers finished in the 500-mile international automobile race today:

1. Fred Frame, Los Angeles,
2. Cliff Wilcox, Indianapolis,
3. Cliff Berger, Los Angeles,
4. Bob Carey, Anderson, Ind.,
5. Russell Snodgrass, Philadelphia.

6. Zeke Meyer, Philadelphia,
7. Jim Hall, Terre Haute, Ind.,
8. Fred Wissell, Philadelphia,
9. Billy Wissel, Kansas City,
10. Joe Huff, Indianapolis.

Four drivers were flagged off the track after Huff finished. They were: Phil Shaffer, Des Moines, Ia., who finished eleventh; Kelly Pettit,
Los Angeles, twelfth; Tony Gujetta, Kansas City, thirteenth, and Subby Stubblefield, Los Angeles, fourteenth.

By the Associated Press.
SPEEDWAY, INDIANAPOLIS,
Ind., May 30.—Freddy Frame of Los Angeles won the 500-mile international automobile race here today, finishing about a minute ahead of Howdy Wilcox, Indianapolis.

Frame's time was 4:48:03.79 for an average of 104.144 miles an hour.

This broke all records for the race, smashing the previous mark of 101.13 established by Peter de Haas in 1925.

Frame, a 37-year-old campaigner of race courses, always was a contender. With the exception of the first 50 miles, he was never farther back than tenth place. He was racing for 10 years and finished second in the 1931 event.

By his victory, Frame is in a position to earn perhaps $250,000 during this season.

Frame took the lead in the last 50 miles and refused to yield it.
He and Wilcox fought it out in the closing miles of the race with Frame having a lead of only 8 seconds at one time.

Berger Third, Carey Fourth.

Cliff Berger, Los Angeles, finished third, tied with a half mile of Wilcox.

Bob Carey of Anderson, Ind., finished fourth, trailing several miles behind.

Russell Snowberger, Philadelphia, was fifth, in crossing the finish line.

Billy Arnold Injured.

The race resulted in two serious injuries. Billy Arnold, the Chicagoan, suffered a broken collarbone, and his mechanician, Spider Mack, suffered a broken pelvis bone in the major smashup in the race. Arnold, one of the pre-race favorites, drove his car into a remaining wall on the north turn, roaring along on his 150th mile.

Tony Gugliotta narrowly escaped death when his car threw the right front wheel while tearing down the track in the closing minutes of the race. Luckily he managed to stop the car on the track and the other drivers tearing along behind him avoided hitting him.

The first 40 cars started the race at 10 o'clock. It was estimated the attendance was between 140,
000 and 150,000, exceeding 100, 000 a year ago. The race is over $100,000 in prizes.

Three Former Winners Out.

Louis Schneider, Indianapolis winner of the 1931 race, gave up at the end of 125 laps because of motor trouble. He had covered 312 miles. Schneider made the third former winner of the race to be dropped out. The others were Billy and Louis Meyer.

Emile Trippet of Los Angeles, a former winner in the race, was dropped out after traveling 312 miles to a perfect clutch. He had a race for 11 laps.

The car driven by Joe Russo, Indianapolis, dropped out after going out of gear because of a water leak in the motor.

Ray Campbell of Detroit was officially declared out of the race after mechanics had worked two hours in an attempt to repair his damaged motor. His car had a broken crank shaft.

The car driven by W. H. Stubblefield of Los Angeles was forced out when it burst into flames on the back stretch. The flames were quickly extinguished and the car was not seriously damaged. Chet Miller of Detroit also gave up the race due to motor trouble. The race withdrawals made the total 22.

Next Scene of 1931 Crash.

Arnold hit the wall in almost exactly the same spot where 'Big Bill' was wrecked a year ago after

WHEAT CLOSER LOWER ON WINNIPEG MARKET

Prices Influenced by Reports of Beneficial Rains in United States.

U. S. Wheat Markets Unsettled With Feed Grains Mostly Lower, According to Weekly Bulletin

Early Sharp Advance Is Offset by Recurrent Weakness in Securities and Dull Export Inquiry.

WINNIPEG, Man., May 30.—Influenced by reports of beneficial rains over United States winter wheat area, wheat prices underwent setbacks in today's trade. Values at the close were $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ cent lower than Saturday's figure.

May dropped $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ cent and July and October each declined $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ cent.

With all American markets closed today trading throughout was narrow with long periods of almost total stagnation. A limited export trade was worked, but it was not important.

Opening unchanged to $\frac{1}{4}$ cent the market seemed content to coast along at that level until near the close. Reports of rains in the South uncovered a burst of selling shortly after midseason and the market quickly dropped to the low point.

Corn, wheat and coarse grain trade was slow. Prices generally showed sympathetic to the decline in wheat.

Closing prices were: Wheat—May 32 $\frac{1}{4}$ cent, July 32 $\frac{1}{4}$ cent, Oct. 65 $\frac{1}{4}$ cents—May 33 $\frac{1}{4}$ cent, July 33 $\frac{1}{4}$ cent, Oct. 30 $\frac{1}{4}$ cent.

Barley—May 29 $\frac{1}{4}$ cent, July 29 $\frac{1}{4}$ cent, Oct. 35 $\frac{1}{4}$ cent.

Flaxseed—May 33 $\frac{1}{4}$ cent, July 35 $\frac{1}{4}$ cent.

FOREIGN STOCK MARKETS

SHOW SOME IRREGULARITY
By the Associated Press.

LONDON, May 30.—Trading on the Stock Exchange opened quietly. Gold mine shares and gilt-edged securities maintained their early strength, while others developed irregularity. Foreign issues were weak.

The closing was uncertain.

The Crest of the Wave.

HEROIC little figure for a short time, Wolgast listed a number of famous foes into insensibility the following year,

among them George Memmick,

"Butcher Boy" Anton Le Gravé,

Frankie Burns and the noted

English bather, Owen Moran—

names forgotten now, but famous

20 years ago.

Toward the close of the year AD was matched with Freddie Welsh; but two days before the fight he was rushed to the hospital for an appendicitis operation and a comparatively unknown fighter, Willie Ritchie, took his place and made a great showing. He was the more abrupt to his sorrow.

The operation seemed to have affected Wolgast's stamina, but not his courage. The following year, in a fight with Jose Thar-

ra, known to the fighting world of the day as "Joe Rivers," Wolgast got a lucky break.

He and Rivers traded punches simultaneously. Both landed.

Both went down. Rivers was underneath and banged his head on the floor. Wolgast was able to get up unsteadily before the count of 10; Rivers was not. And the title was saved for Wolgast.

On the Downgrade

THERE were no more knockouts in Wolgast's record in that year, 1912. It was apparent

he was slipping. Many forecast dire things for him; if he defeated his title against the newcomer to fistic fame, Willie

Ritchie.

But did that deter Wolgast?

Rather, it hurried him into a 20-round match, as a result of which he lost his title. He was not the Wolgast of old. Many beatings and the operation had robbed him of his vitality. Fighting an uphill and losing battle, he committed a foul in the sixteenth round that cost him his crown.

That was the last of Wolgast

as a title hope. Broken in body,

he slipped down the ladder fast.

He refused to quit fighting and his record became dotted not only with defeats but with foul-

something not found in his earlier record.

Just a ghost of his former self

he figured in several battles in this city, at the fag end of his career. Shortly afterwards he began to slip mentally and was taken in charge by friends.

The trail's end finds him now

just a broken remnant—an object lesson to those young moths who find themselves in danger of being singed by the flame of pugilism.

—by Martha Carr

LOUISE, the Laugh Maker

An Intimate Glimpse of One of Hollywood's Favorite Daughters.

LOUISE FAZENDA.

MY DEAR MRS. CARR: I go to high school. Other girls go out with boys, which I do not care to do at my age. But, of course, they suspect that I do that before going to my girl friend's house after school. I always go there or to my cousin's. It is in the evening I go to my friend's house, my father asks me where I expect to go first. I tell him I am going straight there, which is the truth, but he doesn't believe me. My friend brings me home in her car; you would think that enough proof, but he only laughs and again asks me where I was before going to her house. When he acts that way my heart just turns against him. I am sure my mother believes me. What can I do to convince him?

JUST ANOTHER BLONDE.

I really do not believe it is necessary to do anything but take it as a joke. He probably knows very well that you are not going other places. And likely he is teasing you all the time. You know he could easily find out, if he cared to, just where you go. That wouldn't be much of a trick at all. Just say to him that he could easily follow you when you were not expecting it and in that way would know. It isn't serious enough, when you know you are not guilty (this ought to make you easy in your own mind) for your "heart to turn against him."

EAR MRS. CARR:

I would like to learn to play the piano but am without funds. I started taking lessons while in school, but had to discontinue. Now I am married and the mother of a 2 1/2-year-old baby, but still long to study. My friends say I sing rather well. I would gladly do embroidery work at my home or anything in return for lessons. Can you advise me?

MRS. P.

If you will send me your address with self-addressed and stamped envelope, I think I may have information that will interest you.

DEAR MRS. CARR: I am 14 years old and have been wondering whether or not I am old enough to go out with boys. My mother doesn't approve of it. I have quite a number of boy friends among whom I like two. One of them has black hair which turns red when it is washed.

Do you think it would be right to deceive my mother by going out with him?

DOUBTFUL.

At 14 you should consider your mother's judgment before any other. You are too young to stay up late nights and too immature to take your own head for deciding your social diversions. And as for the boy with black hair that turns to red, I believe the only thing you can do for him is to recommend a more frequent shampoo. Of course I know that the work of the association here for the "Abolition of Smoke" has been a little slow of achievement and it doesn't take long for any color to turn black; still, I think with persistence and energy the boy might have red hair continuously.

MY DEAR MRS. CARR: I am to graduate from grammar school in June. Do you think a pale blue dress would be proper? And what kind of shoes and stockings?

A GRADUATE.

Those things are generally discussed and settled by the class, so that the girls are not embarrassed to wear white, that is, if it is the custom to wear white any pretty simple summer dress will do. White shoes and light beige stockings will be all right.

MY DEAR MRS. CARR: Will you kindly help settle the following: Mrs. A. says I should have brought my wife to visit her when we moved here. My wife claims it was Mrs. A.'s place to call upon us. They had met when we married, Mrs. A. having moved here from California. Both ladies are feeling "put out" as both claim they are right. As we are strangers here, it would be pleasant to be friendly. I do not believe it makes a lot of difference, but the ladies do not agree with me.

J. B. C.

As a matter of form there is no argument. Mrs. A. having been an earlier resident in the neighborhood or community, should have called (or should call now) upon your wife. Since you are all friends, not total strangers who need to be given a sign that they are acceptable in the neighborhood, it seems too bad to quibble over the strict form.

DEAR MRS. CARR: How could a club start a small orchestra? Would a piano, guitar, banjo and violin be enough? How could you induce the girls to start an orchestra? ANOTHER MEMBER.

Ask any of the orchestra leaders around town, how these instruments would balance.

Letters intended for this column should be addressed to Martha Carr at the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Mrs. Carr will answer all questions of general interest but, of course, cannot give advice on matters of a purely legal or medical nature. Those who do not care to have their letters published may enclose an addressed and stamped envelope for a personal reply.

An Intimate Glimpse of One of Hollywood's Favorite Daughters.

HOLLYWOOD, May 28.—LOUISE FAZENDA received in her "fan" mail the other day a letter of praise which concluded with the sentence: "Now, please don't send me an autographed picture; I wouldn't know what to do with it if I had it."

She loves its frankness. She has kept every "fan" letter she ever received. The accumulation fills two attics.

"Some day when I'm old," she says, "and no one wants me any more, I'll read them over again. I answered them all."

She's that appreciative.

You would like Louise. You would find, among other things, that:

She has the only really green eyes in Hollywood. She dislikes the word "fate" or "kimber." She says they seem so final. She doesn't like the fall of the year when the leaves turn red and flutter to earth and the trees are left naked before the winds. She goes shopping with a market basket. She loves coffee, cheese, ice cream and pumpkin pie. She has no time for a hobby. She reads detective stories and no claim of belonging to the intelligentsia. She can cook a good meal and is very fond of duck. She does not play golf, but loves to whip a stream for trout.

DIRECTOR WILLIAM BEAUDINE calls her "moral insurance." To Hal Wallis, her husband, she is "Dear Old Daddy." Fazenda is "Miss Fandango" or "Ladis." To mother, "Daughter." To father, "dear" unless provoked. Then she becomes icily just "Daughter." All Hollywood knows her now as "Louise."

She says in nationality she belongs to the League of Nations. Her father is French and Spanish and her mother German and Dutch. She has never been late at a studio. She has played in pictures 15 years.

Her first work was as an Indian squaw in a picture for Universal. The wigs gave out before she got here and they stood her in the background as a "blonde Indian." Next day she was a Mormon settler and earned $5.

She has her first studio check for the sum of $5 framed and hung on the wall.

She declares the tutoring one gets from Mack Sennett is the best training obtainable in Hollywood. She worked at his studio with Gloria Swanson, Phyllis Haver and Marie Prevost and other famous names now, too, are famous. Mack Sennett told her she looked like a cat.

She was pelted with dough, mud, ink, ripe tomatoes, wet mops and dishes while working in Sennett comedies. She never was hit with a pie, but she draped many over the visage of Ben Turpin.

She dislikes "personal appearances" in theaters. She thinks John Barrymore is one of the few capable of making them creditably because he has something to say and it's the best. The bitterest moment of her life was when she played a supposedly dramatic role in "Recompense" with Irene Rich and the audience laughed at her. Even friends thought she was burlesquing her part. But she wasn't.

She does not own a cat. If she gets herself beginning to dislike some girl fearfully she sends her a present. "It changes your whole line of thought and your attitude," she explains. "Just try it." She never wears gloves. She removes all makeup before going home so her husband will not see her in grease-paint. She is prettiest when she smiles.

She has no chums or intimates. She never expects to voluntarily retire.

She never leaves home without carrying the little pocketbook she had when a child. "It is a Cartelian head taken from an Egyptian tomb, the gift of a 'fan.' It's her luck piece.

She makes a wish over her left shoulder when she sees a new moon.

She doesn't care for crowds either than to study human nature.

She has a glorious sense of humor and can "take it on the chin" when it's a joke. She adores children. She is a gentleman and a square guy."

HEALTH

Brief articles prepared by experts. Edited by Dr. Leo Goldstein, for the New York Academy of Medicine.

Killing Colds

CAN one kill a cold? Can one when feeling a cold "coming on" do anything to prevent its development?

If one were to believe the claims of nostrum venders and "curbstone" prescribers, nothing seems easier.

Unfortunately, however, nostrums are ineffective and "curbstone" prescriptions may be given with the best of intentions, but are of no use.

Must every cold then run its full course and is there nothing we may do to modify its severity or shorten its duration?

No. There is much we may do.

But that is not killing a cold.

To begin with, the tendency of the common cold is to be self-limited. Hence the wisdom in the reply of the old English general practitioner who, when asked what is the best thing to get for a cold, said "Two dozen soft linen handkerchiefs."

In addition, there are many tried and useful home remedies.

These, as everyone knows, involve taking hot baths and hot drinks to induce perspiration, drinking copiously warm slightly alkalinized drinks, going to bed and staying there as long as the symptoms allow, fresh air, salt-water gargles and, finally, a light semi-liquid diet and good elimination.

With such care the common cold is not likely to be followed by complications and its severity and duration can be controlled.

Then, as far as escaping the common cold, we should take into consideration and apply the newer findings in dietetics. The claims for vitamins D and A as cold preventives have been grossly exaggerated.

But buttermilk and eggs are good foods under any circumstances, and the underweight individual will profit by including them in his diet. Codliver oil, too, may be added.

The Wrong Wife

CHAPTER THIRTY-SEVEN.

CORDOVA was bathed and dressed, save for his dinner jacket, when he heard the doorbell ring. One sleeve in the coat, he waited. He heard voices, heard Deborah's sweet cool notes above the others, and then the half-opened door was opened wide.

"You're presentable?" she said.

His hand went through the sleeve.

"Absolutely," he said.

"Then dash right out of this room and let me get ready for dinner."

"It's rather early for that, isn't it?" he asked mildly.

The faintest color appeared on her cheeks.

"It's the Folliess. With the Cragins. And Millie insists upon seeing all the show. We're dining at the Casino at a quarter past 7."

Again answers to bewilderment came to him, but he refused to admit them to his mind. If they weren't true, he'd die.

After the play, Cragin pleaded business in the morning, and the Cragins dropped them at the Cordova apartment. Silently the young couple rode upstairs, and silently they entered their living room.

Deborah dropped her wrap on a chair; Cordova deposited his opera on another chair.

"Well, you returned," said Deborah.

"Returned?" echoed Cordova.

"Why not?"

"Thank you love me," she said.

"Love you? You knew that before I went away," he said.

"No, I didn't."

"But I told you—"

"But you hadn't seen Del—alone."

"What do you mean by that?" he asked.

"Will you tell me that Del didn't well make it clear that she found you not disagreeable?"

He flushed painfully.

"You had to see her. You had to arouse your chivalry. Well, you've seen her. Oh, I know you have."

He put the paper down sadly. Of course, he had not been responsible for Ganley's death—Grady and his own common sense had rid him of that dangerous belief—but it was all too sad. He looked up at Deborah's entrance into the room.

She wore a frock of yellow and black chiffon. And the smart little wrap she wore came barely to the hips and was gathered coquettishly in front.

"Uncle Dan takes no sides. If Delmar got you and I lost you—that would be our affair. He tells me tales. But I know Delmar. She saw you."

"I saw her," he said.

"And you beat Uncle Dan." He beat me," he corrected her.

"He told me differently. He said you were the one completely incorrigible man he knew. That's a victory for you."

"He's still boss of his party," said Cordova.

"Oh, that." She shrugged disdainfully. "Who cares about that? If you want to go in for politics, begin at the bottom, devote your lifetime to it—and throw away every scruple you ever had—like Uncle Dan—"

"But you admire him—you love him," said Cordova.

"Of course. I do. He's a great man. And if you'd given in to him—I wouldn't be here now."

"When did you move here?" he suddenly asked. "Before he telephone you—or after?"

"Before," she replied. "Because I knew you'd not give in to him—or Del, either."

"Only one thing could tell you that," he said evenly.

"Only one thing," she replied. Her voice was as even as his, but the color was high in her throat and cheeks.

"Do we mean the same thing?" he asked.

"I hope so," she replied. He grasped for her, then dropped his hands and moved away.

"Dan—couldn't stand it this time. Deb, when you told me that you'd loved me—and then that you didn't."

"How could I come to you then?" she asked. "I'd had time to think. I was married to you. I'm not wholly undesirable. But I didn't want to be desired for the obvious things. If you should see Delmar—"

"But I did see her," he protested.

"But not alone. I wanted to wait until you had seen her. When I wasn't there. Oh, are you going to make me say anything?"

"Then you can hers—to this apartment—because you loved me."

"Why else?" she asked.

He looked at her.

"You were very cruel to me, Deborah. Remember Grady?"

"Grady?" she looked bewildered. "My best man."

"He gave me a lot of sage advice today. He said that if I knew didn't win em, flets might."

"And you are prepared to accept that advice, to follow it?"

"I am prepared to follow that advice," he said.

"In the order in which he gave it, she inquired."

"In that order," he said.

"Why, you talk as though you weren't sure of her."

"I can't believe that I'm that lucky," he said.

"Oh, but you are beautiful. Dick, well, you'll get over it."

The way you got over caring for Grady, eh?"

"Then, Dick," she said, "please begin with kisses."

And Cordova did.

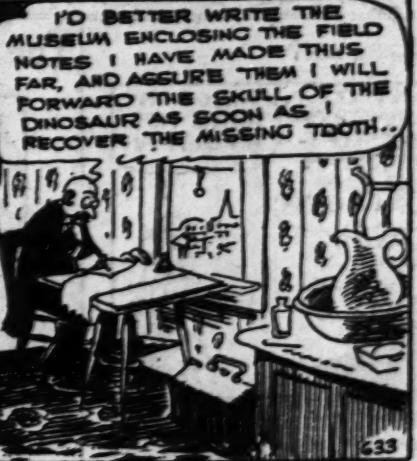

The End.

WASHINGTON, May 31.—Speaker Garner testified before the House Ways and Means Committee today in support of his $2,309,000,000 relief program. He was the first witness.

Chairman Collier, who has been ill since January, took the gavel again, replacing Acting Chairman Crisp.

Other witnesses scheduled to follow the Speaker were W. C. Hushong, representing the American Federation of Labor; Earl Smith of Chicago, president of the Illinois Agricultural Association; the Rev. John O'Grady of Washington, secretary of the National Council of Catholic Charities; and Judge Ewing Cockrell of Warrensburg, Mo.

In the memory of the oldest member, this was the first time a Speaker has gone before a committee to advocate legislation. Garner was a member of the Ways and Means Committee for 25 years, and was ranking Democrat when he assumed the speakership.

Demands Direct Relief.
Garner demanded that the committee report favorably a bill providing for direct relief to aid the starving and suffering people in his country.

The Texan told the 15 Democrats and 10 Republicans on the committee that the question before them was "Is it the duty of Congress to take note of the condition of the people and pass legislation to give the starving and suffering relief?"

Explaining that he was leaving testimony on the merits of his $2,309,000,000 relief program to members of House committees handling various sections of the legislation, Garner said he desired to discuss the policy of the proposed legislation.

"I think it safe to say that it is known by almost all men that in the state of affairs in this country at the present time men and women are suffering for want of food," Garner said.

He read a statement inserted into the Congressional Record by Senator Jones (Rep.), Washington, received from an employment committee to say to the country whether the Federal Government should give relief to those in distressed circumstances.

"It is up to you to determine whether this Congress shall decline to pass legislation to meet the situation or whether under the Constitution you feel the Federal Government is unable to render aid," Garner said.

"Admittedly the premises that there are starving and suffering people, you are somewhat foreclosed either to favor the legislation or disapprove it on constitutional grounds."

Garner said he had reports from the Red Cross, the Salvation Army, the American Federation of Labor, and other organizations that many people were suffering for "want of food and rainment."

At the outset of the hearing, Garner leaned on the witness
